To Dana Syracuse and the NY DFS,

While I respect your opinion on the subject of cryptocurrencies, I have to comment on my objection of the BitLicense regulations. The regulations at their current state would do little to benefit cryptocurrencies such as Bitcoin, Litecoin, Dogecoin, etc. As an altcoin miner, this would affect me just as much as it would New York citizens as well as new companies and crypto users outside of the United States. These regulations, while with good intentions, mainly attack the development of future currencies, the civil liberties of American citizens, and the anonymity which is vital to cryptocurrencies in general. I request that the NY DFS takes the time to speak with associations and developers related to cryptocurrencies to gather an agreeable compromise. Thank you for your consideration.
